Old Soldiers Still Fighting Their Old Battles.

LAST HOURS OF SHERIDAN'S CAVALRY. A
Reprint of War Memoranda by Henry Edward Tremain, Late Brevet Brigadier General, Major and Aide-de-Camp, United States Volunteers,
With map and two illustrations. 12mo, pp. 563.
Bonnell, Silver & Bowers.

Although the Civil War was ended forty years ago, the fighting is apparently still going on. The sword may have been beaten into a ploughshare, but the pen has not been reforged. It is still busy in keeping alive, if not the greater, at least the minor issues of the earlier struggle, and the battle rages as earnestly between old comrades in arms as it does between former foe-

The first twelve chapters of the present volume were written by General Tremain in the summer of 1865, while the events recorded were fresh in his mind. They recount the incidents of the last eleven days' fighting, leading up to Lee's surrender at Appomattox. General Tremain served as alde-de-camp to General Crook, who commanded the second division of Sheridan's splendid cavalry corps. Without in the least professing to give the complete story of the campaign, but rather his recollections of that part of it which came under his personal observation, he nevertheless succeeds in painting a spirited and undoubtedly generally accurate word picture of the climax of the Rebellion, in which the cavalry necessarily occupies a very considerable portion of the foreground.

The original notes were discovered by General J. Watts de Peyster, who edited them for publication in "The Army and Navy Journal." The editor, while respecting the author's text, extended it considerably with notes of his own. occasionally interjecting remarks, criticisms and objections, expressing his protests in favor of greater consideration for the infantry. The author in now presenting his work in book form has added a chapter reviewing the events in the light of the official records and from a perspective of forty years, but allowing the original editorial comments to stand and courteously giving space to General de Peyster's own account of the campaign. On one point, however, they are ready to agree, and that is the attitude of General Lee up to the moment of the capitulation. It is thus stated by General Tremain in his new

Had General Lee, as he rode to what he styled "the picket line," expecting to meet General Grant, and before learning there the outcome of his Sunday morning collisions, intended to surrender his army absolutely, he would have halted his army in a compact defensive position. The evidence points to the absence of any such intention on his part. He might have been willing to recognize the inevitable; but until the morning's battle had progressed beyond the first Confederate successes, and had reached the second stage presaging a sangulnary Confederate defeat, there seemed no other Confederate intention than to escape with as much as possible, and to capitulate with as little as possible, on the best terms obtainable. . . The orders for Lee's cavalry to escape do not seem to have been countermanded, but were in large part successfully carried out.

General Les is dead and cannot reply to this deduction in regard to his motives and intentions. Possibly he would find nothing in it to contradict, and would hold that in so acting he was only doing his best duty to the cause for which he had so long and ably contended. Possibly he would resent the suggestion of disingenuousness in his communications with General Grant. Since this is a matter that can never be settled, it will probably continue to be agitated so long as the veterans of the conflict live to fight over their old battles in fraternal spirit; and no harm or ill-feeling need result so long as the object sought is the establishing of historic truth and not the perpetuation of prejudiced opinion.

LITERARY NOTES.

Mr. Eden Philipotts will presently add another volume of fiction to the series in which he has been celebrating the life and landscape of Dartmoor. In this case he will not give us a complete novel, but a collection of stories, revolving around the same subject, and to that extent

That house at Putney Hill which has filled some pilgrims with awe as the residence of Algernon Charles Swinburne and Theodore Watts-Dunton has lately been the scene of tremendous literary activities. The poet has begun to bring out a new edition, in five voles, of his tragedies, and he has just issued his first novel. At the present moment Mr. Watts-Dunton is likewise interesting himself in fiction. He has a new story on hand, toward which, we suppose, readers who fell in love with "Aylwin" will look with bated breath, Mr. Swinburne as a dramatic writer provokes, by the way, these shrewd remarks in "The London

His plays fall between two stools, they are something between lyrical and dramatic poetry, and they lack the supreme virtues of either kind. They were written probably to work off his enormous energy of production at times when that energy was not accompanied by a very instant inspiration. Many poets—Wordsworth, Browning and Tennyson—have written a good deal of their poetry not because they had something urgent to say, but because it was the business of their lives, and when they wrote from habit they had to find a pretext for writing. Mr. Swinburne's pretext has sometimes been an ode to Victor Hugo, sometimes a play. He has looked to the dramatic form to inspire him, and often it has inspired him with splendid passages, but his inspiration has nevertaken the dramatic form. That form has always been suggested to him by the fact that great poets whom he admites have used it. No one but a great lyrical poet could have written his plays; yet, if they survive, the lyrical poetry that will keep them allye will be read not in them, but in "Poems and Ballads" and "Songs Before Surrise."

The widow of the historian, John Richard Green-herself a learned author and editorhas taken up an important task. This is the writing of a history of Ireland, her native country. She was before her marriage Alice Stopford, daughter of the Archdeacon of Meath. Learned as she is, Mrs. Green is described as being in person charming, vivacious and free from any reminiscence of the academy-"her native wit finding in her profound knowledge of history matter for lightening rather than weighting her conversation."

Not all poets are gentle poets, it is clear, and the emotions excited by participating in and watching athletic contests have appealed to many of them and found expression in their To Wallace Rice, however, we believe, must be given the credit of being the first person to make an anthology of the poets of sporting delights. In his recently published volume, "The Athlete's Garland" (A. C. McClurg & Co.), he has gathered together a collection of poems inspired by games of muscle and skill, embracing a wide variety of athletic endeavor. There are, nevertheless, some notable omissions. Boxing and the joys of the P. R. find no place in the volume. Whether this neglect is due to editorial squeamishness or to lack of material, we are afforded no clew. Perhaps even the poets of motion and action have drawn the line at the solar plexus. Yet it is strange that fencing and polo have either not appealed to the writers of verse or have escaped the scrutinizing inquisition of Mr. Rice; and it hardly seems possible that the national game of Ireland, hurling, and that favorite ice game of the Scot, curling, should be going down the ages "unhonor'd, and unsung." The authors quoted range from Homer and Bacchylides to Rudyard Kipling and Clinton Scollard, so that it would seem as if the editor had pretty closely swept the field of athletic poetry in his effort to complie the book; and unless one is prepared to confront him with chapter and verse, he must be given credit for what he has accomplished rather than criticised for his apparent imperfections.

From this point of view Mr. Rice deserves more than a word of mere appreciation for his judgment and good taste in the selection of the contents of the book. Not all the printed poems, naturally, are of the highest rank, but there is nothing to offend and a great deal to charm. The make-up of the volume is agreeable to the eye, and it is not too bulky to overweight the tired athlete who seeks inspiration for further effort from its pages. Perhaps if wearied with more violent forms of exercise he will find refreshment the tranquil game of which Robert Herrick sings the pleasures:

STOOL BALL. At stool-ball, Lucia, let us play For sugar cakes and wine; Or for a tansy let us pay The loss, or thine, or mine.

If thou, my dear, a winner be, At trundling of the ball, The wager thou shall have, and me, And my misfortunes, all.

But if, my sweetest, I shall get, Then I desire but this: That likewise I may pay the bet And have for all a kiss.

Mr. Hall Caine has been replying to his detractors in the press. In the course of a speech delivered before some North Lancashire journalists the other day, he explained that the newspapers had invented a double for him, whom he called "my other Me." This double, he told his listeners, is "a shocking story teller in both senses; . . . as vain as a peacock; . a shocking fool; . . . a shameless literary Barnum; . . . a shocking old Shy-lock; . . . a sentimental idiot in financial af-. a.blatant old Bluebeard; an impostor and a thief," and against being in any way identified with this monster Mr. Caine vehemently protested, saying:

Such, gentlemen, is the double of a semi-public man as he masquerades in the newspapers. I am responsible for this ruffian in the eyes of a public that takes its morning journals seriously. I have done about fifteen years' hard for him already, and although I don't ask for compensation for a miscarriage of justice, I do ask to be let off. I am about tired of playing Sally for an insane person whose friends ought to be taking care of him if half of what is said about him is true.

When Mr. Caine visits this country in the fall, as he expects to do, he ought really to admonish the gentlemen at whom he directs the following passage:

When I first went to America he [my other Me] told an astonished public out of my own mouth that my head resembled Shakespeare's and my face resembled Christ's. Naturally, I concluded that nobody in his senses would take this amazing American pleasantry seriously, but it was repeated in sedate English newspapers, and it still turns up occasionally in journals that are not conducted in Colney Hatch.

Decidedly we are sorry for Mr. Hall Caine.

SENDS CASE BACK.

Justice Lambert Refuses to Hear Manhattan Motion.

Seeing no reason why strictly Manhattan cases should be brought to the Supreme Court in Kings County, Justice Lambert, in the latter court, yes-County, Justice Lambert, in the latter court, yesterday sent to Manhattan for argument the motion for a certificate of reasonable doubt in the case of John W. Wooten, the lawyer, recently sentenced to nine years and six months in Sing Sing.

George Gordon Battell, attorney for Wooten, said that he had applied to the court in Kings County on account of the notoriety that had been given to the case in the Manhattan papers. Justice Lambert replied that he did not think that would influence the judgment of the justices there. With Mr. Battell, as counsel, was General Benjamin F. Tracy, who had come in from his summer home to make the argument. Justice Lambert cut off the argument, however, saying that he believed every case should be disposed of in the dapartment where it originates. It is understood that the argument on the motion will be made in Manhattan this morning.

NELDEN FAILED OFTEN.

Many Complaining Letters-Doctor Says Mrs. Ware Quit Too Soon.

Persons who went to the Tombs Police Court yesterday expecting to hear testimony against Dr. Andrew L. Nelden, the "beauty doctor," of No. 13 East 29th-st., who was arrested Wednesday night on the complaint of Mrs. Josephine Ware, April 17 the Commissioner of Public Works of Denver, were disappointed. Dr. Neiden was arraigned, but his counsel obtained an adjournment of the examination until Monday, and the was continued until within two days of comprisoner was released in $1,000 ball most $1,900, on his promise to remove wrinkles ing that it interfered with the street rights, and from her face and make her look young and on May 12. Mrs. Maris Seaver brought a similar from her face and make her look young and beautiful, and scarred her face so badly as to destroy what beauty she had, was at the office of Charles Chadwick, deputy assistant district attorney, with some of her women friends, but did not appear in the police court. She went away disappointed when she was informed of the adjournment of the examination.

Mr. Chadwick had some letters from patients of Dr. Nelden. They had been found by Detective Sergeant McConville in a suit case in Dr. Nelden's office, and had been confiscated as evidence, at the time of Dr. Nelden's arrest. One woman is West 47th-st., Manhattan, had written:

The treatment you gave me for the wrinkles has done me no good. I am very sorry to say you told me the wrinkles would be gone in six weeks, but they are getting worse every day. It is hard to think I gave you $10 for that treatment, and that it has done me no good. My face is thin and I have hollow cheeks.

A woman wrote from Brewster, N. Y., as follows: A woman wrote from Brewster, N. 1. as follows:
Your French clintment has been a failure; have used almost the whole lar, without the least improvement, and it certainly has been a great disappointment, to say nothing of the $5 thrown away. Perhaps you will say I have not used it right. I read that you are very conscientious, but if your conscience will let you ask $5 for something that is not worth it, I think there is a big mistake. Regarding the same ointment, a woman wrote

It makes my face break out in pimples and makes it very sore, also rough and red, but does not affect the freckles or wrinkles. I think it makes hair grow on the face. Mine looks that way.

One letter evidently was in reply to Dr. Nelden's advertisement for a perfect human ear to graft on a wealthy man. It was from a man in South Milwankee, partly as follows:

I am willing to part with one of my ears in ex-change for one not of perfect shape and $5,000, or se with only one ear for $8,000. Will give my con-sent at once. I have been out of work for quite sent at once. I while already.

Dr. Nelden said at the police court yesterday that he would be able on Monday to get the testimony of patients who had been benefited by his treatment. He added:

Mrs. Ware did not take the full treatment. If she had she would have been all right. And if she had applied to me for a return of her money I would have made partial restitution. That is, I would have returned the money for that part of the treatment she had not taken. I think the best recommendation I can have from my patients is the fact that St. Gregory's Hospital, recently opened at No. 33 Gold-st., and founded by me, was made possible through the voluntary contributions of my patients toward a charity the necessity for which has been fully demonstrated in the few weeks the hospital has been open.

Mrs. Ware has neglected to state that I remodelled and straightened her nose with subcutaneous injections, which was a part of my contract. It is 50 per cent better looking than it was before she came to me. In the case of wrinkles I use strong acids to bister the skin. It, of course, is raw for several days, but with the use of my olntment heals up absolutely smooth. If Mrs. Ware had been willing to submit to regular treatment her skin would have healed smoothly, as it has done in the cases of hundreds of others.

After the start of St. Gregory's Hospital in Gold-

After the start of St. Gregory's Hospital in Goldst. Dr. Nelden announced that he would apply to have police calls for ambulances sent to it in the downtown district of Manhattan. Apparently there has been some arrangement to let the know of calls to other hospitals, for St. Gregory's ambulance has had some exciting races with the ambulances from Gouverneur and Hudson Street hospitals in accident cases.

TO PUNISH INSULTERS OF FLAG. Boston, July 13.-Dr. Henry Hull, Supreme Grand Master of the Orange Institute, announced to-day

Master of the Orange Institute, announced to-day that he has taken official action toward the punishment of all members of the order who were concerned in the insult to the American flag at London, Ont., yesterday.

Dr. Hull has ordered the immediate suspension of every American member of the order who participated in the affair, and he has demanded that Supreme Grand Master Sproule, of Canada, suspend the Canadian members who tore down and trampled upon the American flag.

Dr. Hull says that if his wishes are not respected he will suspend the lodges to which Americans are accredited.

WATER PRESSURE LOW.

DISTRICTS DESTITUTE.

Staten Island Permits Withdrawn-Famine Threatened.

With its permits to lay mains connecting pumping stations at Grant City and Edgewater revoked by the city, the Crystal Water Company, which supplies most of the south shore of Staten Island, is unable to furnish sufficient pressure, according to its operatives, to send water through its pipes save to the low lying districts, and whole towns are practically without water. So great is the hardship occasioned by this condition that public meetings are being advocated at which the citizens will call on Mayor McClellan to take action looking toward a municipal water system.

Behind this serious condition, which is compelling people in Tompkinsville, Clifton, Stapleton, Rosebank, Fort Wadsworth and South Beach to carry their water from brooks and the lowest regions to which the pressure will send the water, and exposes these towns to danger in case of fire, lies apparently opposition on the part of the city to the Crystal Water concern. Bainbridge Colby, counsel for that company, said yesterday that while lawsuits to prevent the laying of mains had been decided in the company's favor its permits had been revoked and renewals were refused, "apparently because the city eventually intends to acquire all water plants and sources of water supply in its limits." To keep out this company now because its plant might increase in value would be fallacious reasoning. Mr. Colby said, for whatever value it had now could not be destroyed, and interference with its service to the citizens of Staten Island only would cause needless hardship to them and might in the end add to the cost if the property were appropriated for the city.

The company has a large pumping station near Grant City. On February 1 it received a permit from the Department of Water Supply gave his permission. Work was begun, and pletion. Meantime, on May 11, Borough Presi-Mrs. Ware, who made the larceny charge on dent Cromwell asked for an injunction restrainthe company from laying the mains, sayaction. These were argued on June S, and the motions were denied on July 11.

ing that it interfered with the street rights, and on May 12. Mrs. Maris Seaver brought a similar action: These were argued on June 13, the Department of the worker, on June 13, the Department of Water Supply revoked its permit for laying the mains, and the following day the Department of Public Works followed suit. As to this, Mr. Colby sald yesterday:

I do not believe the conditions on Staten Island within the section supplied by the Crystal Water Company are quite as acute as the residents think. There is always a normal diminution of water pressure at this season of the fixed supply and the natural failure during the summer season of replenishment. The Crystal Water Company is able to meet all demands put upon it, provided it is permitted to avail itself of the copious sources of water supply which it owns. It is a considerable disappointment to the company that it has not already placed at the disposal of its consumers the new sources of supply acquired many months ago at Grant City.

The company is conscious of its duties as a purveyor of water to the rapidly growing district in Staten Island embraced in its franchises, and in order to meet the growing demands upon it acquired at very considerable cost an abundant source of water supply at Grant City and promptly obtained permission from the city authorities to connect this supply with its pumpling station. I have been told by competent experts that the water at Grant City, owned by the Crystal Water Company, is abundant, pure and wholesome. In reliance upon the permits the company expended about $40,000 in the laying of its mains along the Richmond Road and elsewhere in order to make this new source of supply available to its customers. When its work was at the point of completion, however, it was interrupted by suits brought by Mr. Cromwell, President of the Borough of Richmond, and by Maria Seaver, both of whom sued by Judge Stephens and, of course, the company and that the company's right to avail itself of this new supply available to its customers.

and Mrs. Seaver. Notwithstanding the denial of the motions for injunction in these suits, the permits have not been renewed, and the company is still unable to place at the disposal of the consumers in the district supplied by it the abundant water supply which is otherwise at its immediate disposal.

One of the most interesting phases of the Staten Island water situation is that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, nearly a month before these permits were revoked, authorized a contract with the Hudson County Water Company of New-Jersey to furnish water to that section of Staten Island. An injunction is laid against that company preventing its furnishing that water, even if its pipes were ready, and by a law passed by the New-Jersey Legislature, signed May 11, any company is forbidden to draw water from New-Jersey.

The contract authorized by the Board of Estimate called for a minimum of 4,000,000 gallons and a maximum of 10,000,000 from the Hudson County Company. This water was to be supplied at a graduated scale, from $70 a million for the first 4,000,000 gallons to $55 a million if the entire 10,000,000 were used, averaging $62.50 a million gallons. The Crystal Water Company had submitted a contract, an officer said, offering to furnish water for $60 a million gallons, supply unlimited. He wonders why the other contract was chosen.

The citizens residing on the Fingerboard Road, Clifton, are so wrought up over the shortage of water that they have decided to hold an indignation meeting in Clifton this evening, at which time it is proposed to take some action against the Crystal Water Company.
